PARTNERS WITH CHILDREN, FAMILIES, AND COMMUNITIES

2025 ANNUAL REPORT

BUILDING TOMORROW TODAY

“At a time when families face growing economic, social, and systemic challenges, our mission has never been more vital.”

community under our new name, All For Kids. While our roots as Children’s Bureau date back more than a century, this new identity reflects a bold and intentional commitment to the future. All For Kids is more than a name; it is a declaration of who we are and what we stand for—a promise that every decision we make, every partnership we build, and every service we provide is centered on the well-being of children and the world they will inherit. With a clear vision and renewed focus, we have deepened our impact across Los Angeles and Orange Counties, and expanded our reach nationwide, strengthening families, increasing access to critical services, and investing in community-based solutions that meet people where they are. At a time when families face growing economic pressures, social complexity, and systemic inequities, our mission is not only relevant—it is essential.

California is home to the largest foster care system in the nation, and too many children and caregivers continue to navigate complex systems without adequate support.

Dear Friends,

As we look ahead, one truth continues to guide everything we do at All For Kids: when families are supported early, children can grow up safe, healthy, and full of possibility.

This year’s Annual Report, Building Tomorrow Today, reflects our unwavering commitment to prevention, collaboration, and compassion—and to the belief that the work we do now shapes stronger outcomes for generations to come.

This past year marked an especially meaningful chapter in our evolution—our first full fiscal year serving the

At All For Kids, we lead with proactive, prevention-based approaches that help families thrive before crises occur, and to treat and support when they do. Over the past year, we served over 70,000 children and family members with dignity and respect—ensuring that support was not only accessible, but compassionate and culturally responsive. With the vast majority of funds raised directed toward programs, we continue to maximize every dollar to expand reach and deepen impact.

At the heart of our work is Positive Prevention—an approach that brings families, neighbors, and partners together to build resilience and connection. Our Family Resource Centers exemplify this philosophy, serving as trusted community hubs where families can access essential resources, strengthen relationships, and find belonging. This year, we continued to grow and activate these spaces, including the ongoing impact of our first owned Family Resource Center in Palmdale, a long-term investment in the Antelope Valley and in the future of community-centered care.

We are also committed to growing the people who make this work possible. As a learning organization, we continue to invest in professional development through ElevateU, equipping staff members and community partners with the skills and knowledge needed to better serve children and families. Guided by our ABIDE values—Accountability, Belonging, Inclusion, Diversity, and Equity— and TIROC principles—Trauma-Informed, Resilience-Oriented Care—we strive to foster a culture where diverse perspectives are honored and everyone has the opportunity to thrive.

“As we move forward, the progress we’ve made inspires us to keep building—stronger families, safer communities, and brighter futures.”

Our continued financial strength has allowed All For Kids to grow as an organization and respond to emerging needs with agility and purpose. Advocacy remains a cornerstone of this work. Through statewide leadership and legislative engagement, we continue to elevate the voices of children, families, and nonprofit providers—championing policies that strengthen systems of care and create lasting change. I encourage you to explore the policy and advocacy highlights featured in this report.

As we move forward, the progress we’ve made inspires us to keep building—stronger families, safer communities, and brighter futures. Through meaningful partnerships, community engagement, and the dedication of our staff and supporters, All For Kids remains a trusted ally for those we serve.

Thank you for believing in this work and for standing with us. Together, we are building tomorrow—today—for every child and every family.

With gratitude,

BUILDING THRIVING CONNECTIONS

The moments captured in these pages tell a powerful story of connection, care, and possibility. At All For Kids, relationships are the foundation on which children and families grow—between parents and children, neighbors and communities, and the partners who stand beside them. Through these meaningful connections, we are building strong, supportive environments where children can feel safe, supported, and ready to thrive—today and into the future.

1/2 Our Antelope Valley All For Kids Team collaborated with AVRI and other community partners at a backpack giveaway. Full new backpacks are a great start to a new year!

3-5 Black Infant Health Program hosted its 3rd Annual Black History Month Celebration in the Antelope Valley, featuring Bishop Hearn and Mrs. Linda, early community leaders.

6 Comedy Night hosted by All For Kids' Young Professionals and Baron Davis' BIG (Business Inside the Game) was a huge hit for networking and laughs.

7 Senior Directors and Executive Leadership proudly represented All For Kids at the 2024 California Alliance Conference in San Diego where All For Kids was a sponsor.

8 The Capitol Group generously donated Halloween costumes to give some children at Oak View a real treat.

9/10 Our staff came together for our first ever Day of Learning hosted at multiple locations and online.

11/12 Magnolia Place Preschool got a major upgrade to its playground and the children's smiling faces say it all!

13 Paul Weiss & Associates sponsored All For Kids' Winter Wonderland - an event donating well over $50,000 worth of toys and goods to All For Kids' children across locations.

14 The graduating Class of 2024 is ready to start Kindergarten with the many skills they learned at our preschool.

OUR IMPACT

Empowering Families & Building the Future

At All For Kids, prevention is more than a philosophy—it is the foundation upon which children and families grow. By investing early, strengthening families before challenges take hold, and surrounding them with the right supports, we help build stability, resilience, and opportunity from the ground up. The impact reflected in the following data, stories, and milestones shows how a prevention-first approach is shaping safer childhoods and stronger communities—today and for generations to come.

Strengthening Families Through Protective Support

At All For Kids, we help families lay the building blocks that protect children from adversity and support healthy development. Through three protective factors—concrete resources, resilience-building practices, and meaningful social connections—families are better equipped to create safe, stable, and nurturing environments where children can thrive. Our prevention-focused programs continue to strengthen families today—so they are prepared for tomorrow. These insights are drawn from 757 retrospective surveys collected across All For Kids prevention programs serving diverse communities throughout Los Angeles and Orange Counties.

BUILDING BRIGHTER FUTURES

STORIES OF GROWTH, EMPOWERMENT & SUCCESS

At the heart of All For Kids are the children and families building brighter futures—one moment, one milestone, and one caring connection at a time. Each story reflects the power of early support, community, and compassion in action. Together, these voices show how families are growing stronger today, creating safe, supportive, and empowering environments where children can thrive now and into the future.

The Family I Dreamed of — And the One I Fought For The Growth of the Bauer Williams Family

The path to motherhood was not the one Layla Bauer Williams imagined—but it was one she chose, fought for, and built with unwavering love. After years of infertility, loss, and unanswered hopes, she and her husband turned toward foster care and adoption, opening their home again and again to children who needed safety, stability, and compassion. Through moments of heartbreak and profound joy, she learned that motherhood is not defined by biology, but by presence, perseverance, and love in action. The following excerpts from a poem, written by Layla herself, reflect a journey shaped by resilience, trust, and the belief that family is built—intentionally, bravely, and one child at a time.

When the right child joins your family,
they become your forever child.

I never dreamt of my wedding day.
But I always dreamt of becoming a mom.

I come from a big family — my dad is the youngest of eight; I have twenty first cousins and forty-five second cousins. My genetics, I thought, guaranteed me an easy, straightforward road to motherhood. I'd decide I was ready, and bing-bang-boom: nine months later, I'd be woken in the middle of the night by contractions, rushed to the hospital, and handed my perfect baby. My husband, Jeremy, and I would lock eyes, tears brimming, marveling at the tiny human we'd made together.

Reality, of course, had other plans...

Before IVF, we'd agreed:
only one round.

A baby didn't have to come from my body to become ours. So, while we chased IVF, we'd also signed up for an orientation at All For Kids to learn about becoming foster and adoptive parents. As a teenager, I'd imagined fostering kids once my biological kids were grown. I pictured a farmhouse — why a farm, I still don't know — filled with teens who needed help finding their way.

After IVF failed, we threw ourselves into foster parent training. We baby-proofed the house. Completed the home study. Six months later, we were approved as resource parents — the "cool kid" term for foster parents.

Seventy-two hours later, the phone rang. Two sisters needed a safe home: three months and eighteen months old. We said yes. Four hours later, they arrived wearing hospital scrubs as makeshift pajamas. I was so excited to meet them — on what was likely the worst day of their tiny lives.

I whispered to myself, Yes, you can.

After four babies came and went, my self-doubt roared back. I'll never be able to adopt. I'm not good enough. Not deserving. I told Jeremy, "I can't keep doing this. I'm good, but I'm not saintly. When will it be my turn to be a real mom?"

He pulled me close. "You already are. You've been a mom to four kids who needed you. Our time will come."

In March 2020, the call came:
a three-month-old baby boy.

When we adopted him a year and a half later, on September 1, 2021, I knew the old All For Kids saying was true: When the right child joins your family, they become your forever child. Alex was meant to be ours. He has my humor and Jeremy's tenderness. He made me a mom.

Eighteen months later, we got another call: a baby boy, born in a park in downtown LA. His mom got him to a hospital in Boyle Heights — I'm still in awe of that. His birth name was Vladimir. We called him Adam. Adam Joseph Bauer Williams. We adopted him on September 3, 2024.

Adam is independent, smart, and social — we call him the Mayor because he greets everyone and tells them his name. His favorite person on Earth is Jeremy, but on the rare occasion he chooses me for comfort, my heart spills over.

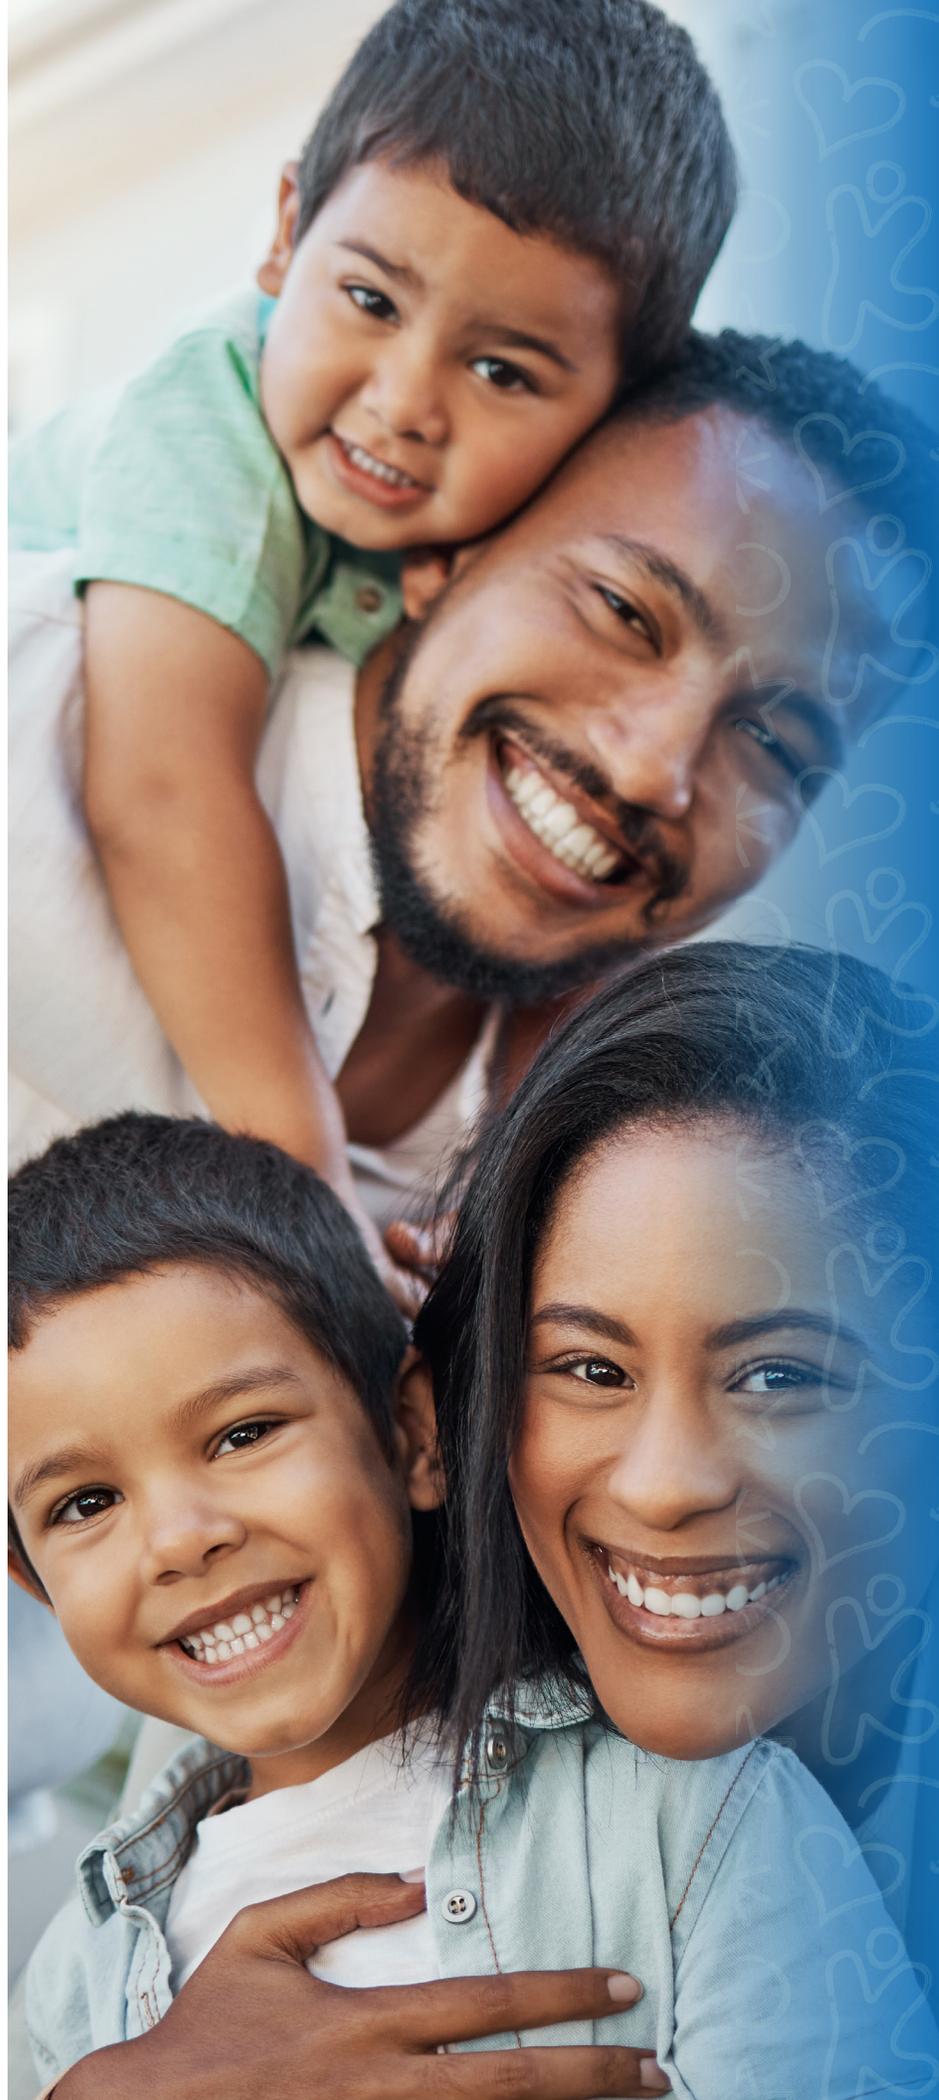

I never met Adam's biological mother. But I know she loved him — she got him somewhere safe. Somewhere we could keep him safe forever.

Each boy has heard his birth story so many times, they jump in to finish my sentences. I always end the same way, because it's the truest thing I know:

Alex and Adam, I've been waiting for you my whole life.
Alex, you made me a mom.
Adam, you made us a family.

And to myself, when doubt creeps back in, I whisper: You fought for this life. You are a good mom. A worthy mom... You deserve this beautiful life, more than you could have ever imagined.

BUILDING BRIGHTER FUTURES

STORIES OF GROWTH, EMPOWERMENT & SUCCESS

All For Kids provides home visitation, case management, parent education classes, linkages and referrals, preschool, support groups, family enrichment classes, and father support groups. Through these services, we create opportunities for caregivers to increase protective factors shown to prevent child maltreatment, and we strengthen communities, families, and children.

Finding Support, Finding Hope

Emily's Story with All For Kids

When Emily Brown first heard from All For Kids, she didn't know what to expect. Like many parents facing challenging circumstances, she was navigating a difficult season. "I had never heard of All For Kids before," Emily shared. "They came to me after I had an incident involving my daughter, who is autistic and a handful."

That unexpected outreach turned into something much greater—a source of consistent support, resources, and hope.

Emily's introduction to All For Kids was through the Prevention and Aftercare (PnA) Program. Led by a dedicated Program Manager, the team worked with Emily to help stabilize her family and ease the everyday burdens that were piling up. From emotional support to concrete assistance with bills, the team was there every step of the way.

That's what people need to know—this program may not take away all your stress, but it takes some of it. And that makes a difference.

"They couldn't help me with everything, but they helped me with so much," Emily said. "That's what people need to know—this program may not take away all your stress, but it takes some of it. And that makes a difference."

She described the support as a blessing, emphasizing how meaningful it was to have a team who not only listened, but followed through. "If the person I talked to couldn't help, they would find someone who could. That's powerful."

Despite recent hardships—including a job that didn't work out—Emily remains hopeful. She's actively looking for employment and leaning into the support system that All For Kids helped her build.

When asked if she would recommend All For Kids to others, her answer was enthusiastic: "Very likely. I have already referred two people, and I'll keep referring more. I appreciate the help so much."

Emily's story is a reminder that the right support at the right time can make all the difference. It also highlights the vital role community organizations like All For Kids play in helping families move from crisis to stability—and eventually, to hope.

From New Mom to Family Support Counselor

Chrystal's Journey with Healthy Families America

When Chrystal was in her third trimester, she was looking for more resources and support for her growing family. Through her WIC intake, she was connected to Penny Lane (a Los Angeles County non-profit providing comprehensive, therapeutic, and residential services), which ultimately referred her to All For Kids' Healthy Families America Home Visiting Program — a decision that changed her motherhood journey.

Chrystal shares, "I was pregnant and really needed extra support. WIC connected me to Penny Lane, and that's how I found All For Kids."

One of her favorite parts of the program was the family events. Chrystal recalls a special fall event where she and her children decorated picture frames and took family photos — an experience that provided much-needed bonding time when she was just four-months postpartum. "I still have that picture frame. It reminds me of that season in my life and how far I've come as a mom," she says.

Healthy Families America is amazing. You get one-on-one support, resources, and you build a strong foundation for your family to thrive.

Beyond the fun activities, Chrystal highlights the critical role her family support counselor played during her home visits. "Those visits were the highlight of my day. I got so much helpful information about my child's development, and the assessments really opened my eyes to my own mental health. I didn't even realize I was struggling with postpartum depression until then. My counselor helped me find resources and ways to cope."

When asked what she would tell other families considering the program, Chrystal doesn't hesitate: "Healthy Families America is amazing. You get one-on-one support, resources, and you build a strong foundation for your family to thrive." Chrystal's story comes full circle — after graduating from the program and applying what she learned, she was hired as a Family Support Counselor at All For Kids. Now, she gives back by supporting other families, just as she was once supported.

"It's really fulfilling to provide the same help I received. I'm so thankful for this journey."

Meet All For Kids Family Support Counselor, Chrystal Mercado

"I have so much joy when I think about how much being a Family Support Counselor for HFA has truly impacted my life in such a positive way. All For Kids has truly allowed me to support families and authentically show up as the best version of me."

Healthy Families America is the home visitation program of Prevent Child Abuse America serving our LA Metro and Antelope Valley locations. The HFA program offers weekly home visits, and services dependent on the family's needs. Services include child development programs, focused support on enhancing bonding and attachment by reading baby cues, depression screenings, developmental screenings, family/parent goal planning, and referrals to community resources.

BUILDING CHANGE STARTS FROM WITHIN

SUPPORTING OUR WORKFORCE

At All For Kids, our greatest asset—and our strongest differentiator—is our people. We have intentionally built a culture that embeds our core competencies into every aspect of how we attract, develop, lead, and retain talent. This approach ensures consistency, mission alignment, and service excellence across all programs and communities we serve.

Our integrated talent ecosystem—anchored by Elevate University, a robust succession planning framework, and an inclusive, strengths-based philosophy—creates a continuous cycle of growth and excellence. By investing in our workforce today, we are building the leadership, expertise, and resilience needed to sustain our mission for the future.

Belonging at work matters. For our employees, it means being valued for who they are and knowing that their work holds deep purpose.

Whether supporting families directly or enabling frontline teams behind the scenes, our staff witness the realities facing vulnerable children every day. While the work can be challenging, their professionalism, compassion, and commitment consistently rise to meet the moment—making a meaningful difference in the lives of children and families.

OUR CORE CULTURAL DIFFERENCES

Competency-Driven Culture: Our organizational competencies are fully operationalized. This ensures cultural continuity and mission-aligned employee behavior at every level.

Circle of Excellence: Integrated Learning Ecosystem: We cultivate a culture of learning and continuous improvement through a three-tiered development model. This approach supports scale, consistency, engagement, and long-term capability building.

Robust Succession Planning & Leadership Pipeline: We maintain a disciplined succession planning process that builds organizational resilience by identifying, developing, and retaining top talent.

Inclusive & Strengths-Based Talent Philosophy: Our people strategy prioritizes belonging, representation, and individual strengths. This philosophy enhances organizational stability and elevates service outcomes across program areas.

Celebrating and supporting our people remains a core priority. Throughout the year, we recognize individual and collective achievements that reflect innovation, resilience, collaboration, and service above and beyond. Engagement opportunities—both in-person and virtual—create space for connection, recognition, and shared purpose across roles and locations.

Listening to our employees is central to how we grow. Regular engagement surveys and peer recognition initiatives provide meaningful insight into employee experiences and help shape improvements across the organization. These feedback loops strengthen trust, reinforce our culture of care, and ensure that employee voices help guide the future of All For Kids. As a human services organization, connection fuels our success. We continue to create opportunities for teams to come together—across sites, programs, and disciplines—to build relationships, share knowledge, and foster belonging.

“Our greatest asset—and our strongest differentiator—is our people.”

The result of belonging is excellence. Through ongoing investment in learning and development, employee engagement, and diversity, equity, and inclusion, our award-winning People Support Services team continues to elevate the employee experience and strengthen our organizational impact. This commitment supports a culture where staff are empowered to grow, lead, and deliver high-quality services—today and into the future.

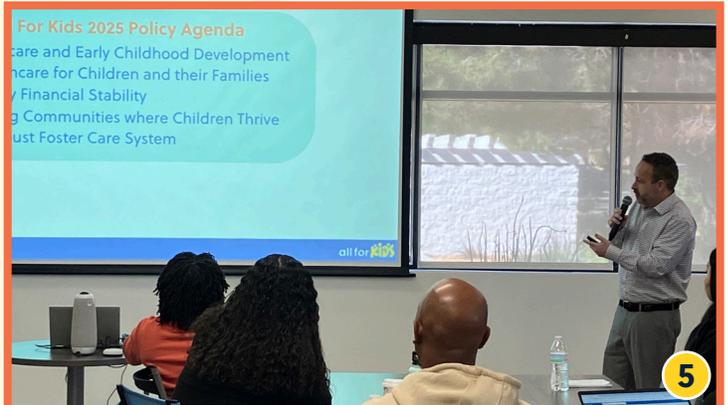

Valuing diversity, equity, and inclusion remains foundational to who we are. By intentionally examining our practices, leadership, and workforce composition, we continue to integrate equitable principles across all aspects of our organization. This work fosters creativity, accountability, and understanding—ensuring All For Kids reflects the communities we serve and remains a place where everyone feels respected, supported, and able to thrive.

Together, these efforts ensure that All For Kids is not only supporting children and families—but also building a workplace where our people are equipped, inspired, and supported to do their best work, today and for generations to come.

BUILDING CHANGE TODAY TO PROTECT CHILDREN TOMORROW

POLICY ADVOCACY IN ACTION

This year, the All For Kids Advocacy Program advanced policies and partnerships that strengthen families and safeguard child well-being across California. By bringing together community voices, trusted leaders, and strategic coalitions, we helped shape solutions that prevent harm before it occurs and reinforce long-term support systems for families. The highlights below reflect how advocacy—grounded in compassion and informed by lived experience—is helping build more resilient communities, today and into the future.

Community Engagement

★ Presentations to Coalition Organizations

Equipped local activists with resources and information including LA County's dozen Child Abuse Prevention Councils, the SPA 2 Council for Family Well-Being, Best Start Antelope Valley, and the Antelope Valley Community Family Resource Center.

Legislative Action

★ Policy Agenda Communications

Engaged with more than a dozen legislators representing All For Kids offices, meeting with them online, in the district, and in Sacramento to push forward bills and budget positions outlined in our annual Policy Agenda.

★ New Partnerships

Built relationship with newly elected Assembly Majority Whip Mark González covering our Magnolia Place Headquarters, providing input on multiple occasions to him and his staff.

In spite of setbacks at the federal level, we were successful advancing state policy bolstering preschool classes, early childhood programs and foster family services.

For more information, visit allforkids.org/advocacy

Advocacy Leadership

★ Coalition Leadership

All For Kids President & CEO, Ron Brown, led Prevention efforts at the Association of Community Human Service Agencies (87 LA-focused nonprofits); Director Adam Seiden spearheaded initiatives at the LA County Inter-Agency Council on Child Abuse and Neglect.

★ Cross-Sector Collaboration

United stakeholders from various fields to generate systemic improvements, building momentum around more prevention.

Expanded Outreach

★ Advocacy Corner Publications

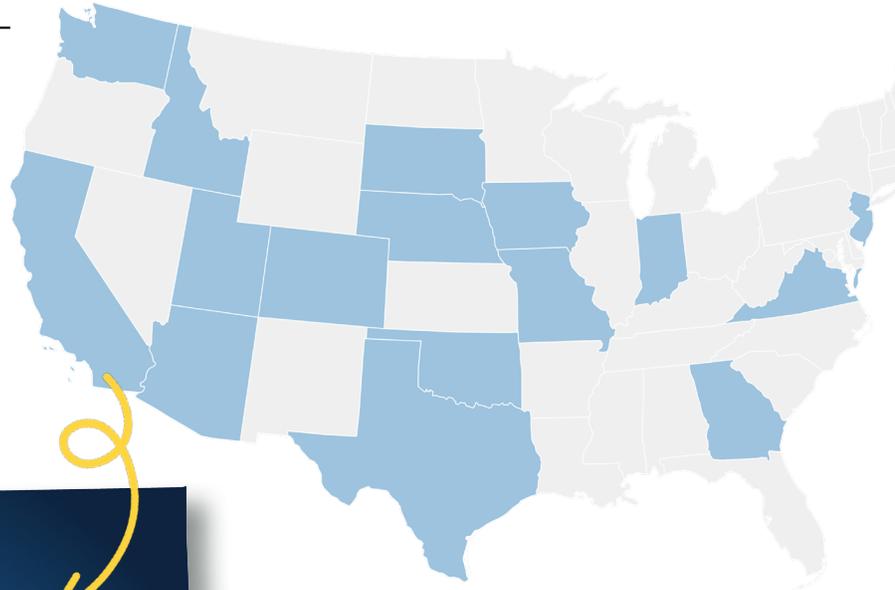

Continued multi-media newsletter and expanded online presence to engage families, staff, and the public in our policy efforts.

BUILDING A BROADER REACH

EXPANDING OUR REACH STRENGTHENS COMMUNITIES

In 2025, All For Kids continued to build access to care across Southern California and beyond. With 14 All For Kids locations serving families throughout Los Angeles and Orange Counties—and additional services and initiatives reaching Kern, Riverside, San Bernardino, and Ventura Counties—our geographic footprint reflects our commitment to meeting families where they are. Our training and subject-matter expertise now extends across California, with expanded reach nationwide through our partnerships with USCRI and RaiseAChild. Together, we are building stronger systems of support that help children and families thrive today and into the future.

TOGETHER, WE BUILD WHAT'S NEXT

INVESTING IN CHILDREN.
STRENGTHENING FAMILIES.
SHAPING THE FUTURE.

At All For Kids, everything we build begins with children. Across our programs, family resource centers, and prevention services, children and families find support during some of the most challenging moments in their lives. This work is made possible by a community of donors, partners, and volunteers who believe every child deserves the opportunity to grow up in a safe and supportive environment.

Partnership That Makes Impact Possible

The work of All For Kids is sustained by individuals, foundations, corporations, and emerging leaders who share a commitment to children and families. Their support allows All For Kids to deliver critical services today while strengthening the programs families will rely on in the years ahead. Community support takes many forms-major gifts that expand programs, annual contributions that sustain services, and corporate and foundation partnerships that advance innovation and long-term impact.

Building a Stronger Future for Children

Support from our community allows All For Kids to continue this work. It helps families access critical resources. It strengthens programs that support children's well-being. It ensures that prevention services remain available for those who need them most. When we invest in children, we strengthen families and build healthier communities.

“The generosity of our donors ensures that children and families have the support they need today while building a stronger future for the generations that follow. We are grateful for the donors, partners, and volunteers whose generosity makes this work possible.”

– Nesha Crossman, Chief Development Officer
